As there ſeem'd to be an inclination in the inhabitants of this city, to have the ſteeple built upon the foundation laid many years ago, the Veſtry were encouraged to attempt a Subſcription; but as all the money they could raiſe, including what little is yet outſtanding, falls much ſhort of the ſum neceſſary to compleat the work, as will be ſhewn by a ſtate of the account of what is already done, they are therefore under a neceſſity to take this method, or the building remain unfiniſhed.

We hope that a work of this kind, which is purely ornamental, will meet with encouragement from all well-wiſhers to the credit, beauty and proſperity of Philadelphia.

RUSTAN and MIRZA. An Eaſtern Tale.

RUSTAN and Mirza, both of the city of Iſpahan, were nearly of the ſame age, and ſimilar in their ſituation and circumſtances; they were merchants by Profeſſion, and known in the city by the name of the two friends. This friendſhip became conſpicuous in their infancy, ſo that, while they continued at ſchool, they gave inſtances of ſuch affection for each other, as is rarely equalled by mature age: they were conſtant companions in ſtudies and diverſions; the ſame inclinations were common to both, and they ſeemed animated by the ſame ſoul. Their friendſhip increaſed with their years, and gathered ſtrength in proportion to their bodies. Their fathers both died about the ſame time, and left them in eaſy, tho' not affluent circumſtances. They entered into partnerſhip, and in a few years made a large addition to their common fortune. Their common intereſt being thus united, they increaſed the bond of union by marrying two ſiſters. In this happy ſtate they continued for ſome years, the envy of the malicious, and the pattern of the wiſe, of the city of Iſpahan, when Ruſtan's wife died. This was the firſt inſtance of adverſe fortune either of them had known; but the amiable affection which animated both their breaſts, made them participators of each other's grief, and, by dividing the burthen, rendered it the lighter. Mirza did all in his power to comfort Ruſtan; and indeed only ſo dear a friend could find language ſufficient to eaſe a mind ſo deeply affected. Time at laſt began to mitigate the melancholy of Ruſtan, and, to compleat the cure, the two friends determined to take a journey to Moaco, partly to ſettle ſome affairs with their agent, but more to remove from Ruſtan thoſe objects which conſtantly brought to his remembrance his faithful and beloved ſpouſe.

They left their affairs to an old ſervant, and ſet out together for Moaco, hoping to return within the year. After ſettling their affairs, they indulged themſelves in all the innocent amuſements of the place; and, in order to render themſelves more particularly acquainted with the general rules of commerce, they courted the acquaintance of all the Europeans of note, which trade had invited to that famous mart. They ſoon became intimate with thoſe of the greateſt conſequence among them, and their modeſt deportment, and affable behaviour, procured the eſteem of every individual; but, at one of thoſe entertainments which the Europeans gave to the Aſiatic merchants, a quarrel happened between Mirza and one of them, while Ruſtan was abſent. The company prevented any miſchief at that time, but the European, after the cuſtom of his country, whiſpered Mirza to meet him the next day without the city. Mirza had too much nobleneſs of ſoul to refuſe the challenge, and left the company pretty early, in order to meet his antagoniſt at the place appointed. But, in his return, he happened to fall, and by that means diſlocated one of his arms. He was carried home by the inhabitants, where he continued full of pain, and in the greateſt agitation of mind. His dear friend was equally affected with his misfortune, but was ignorant of the true cauſe of his emotions, which proceeded more from his being unable to meet the European merchant, than from the anguiſh of his fall. Ruſtan, however, ſoon found means to penetrate the ſecret, and offered to meet the European in his place; but this Mirza would not conſent to; he ſet too high a value upon the life of his friend, to agree to his expoſing it in ſuch a manner. Here a noble ſtruggle of friendſhip enſued, in which neither would yield to the ſuperiority; but Mirza, with the anguiſh of the bruiſe, and agitation of mind, fainted away, and continued ſpeechleſs all that night, and part of the next Day. Tho' the parting with life itſelf was ſcarce equal to leaving his friend in theſe circumſtances, yet Ruſtan had too delicate a concern for his honour, to omit meeting the European at the time appointed. The latter, enraged to find that he was only to fight a deputy, after loading Ruſtan with the moſt opprobrious epithets he could deviſe, ſaid he was glad, at leaſt, of having an opportunity of being revenged on his friend. This ungenerous behaviour inflamed Ruſtan the more, ſo that they engaged, like two furies, and, in a few moments Ruſtan had the good fortune to pierce the heart of his adverſary. Immediately ſeveral Europeans ruſhed from a neighbouring thicket, and ſeized Ruſtan, whom they carried before the Cadi. It was in vain to prevaricate; the European was kill'd, tho' fairly, and Ruſtan, by the law, was condemned to die. He was accordingly dragged to priſon, and orders given for his execution in eight days. Mirza, in a few hours, recovered from his inſenſibility, but it was only to feel the utmoſt ſhock of treacherous fortune. The melancholy tale was concealed from him for ſome time, but at laſt he was made acquainted with it. His grief was too great to be expreſſed; he received the news of his friend's fate, as if a thunderbolt from the clouds had pierced his breaſt; he was incapable of uttering a ſingle word, and only ſighs found a way from his afflicted heart. At laſt, recollecting himſelf, that a ſtate of inactivity was very unſuitable to the calls of friendſhip, he roſe up, and, notwithſtanding the inflammation in his diſlocated arm, wholly applied himſelf to ſave the life of his friend. He applied to the Cadi, by means of the interpoſition of the greateſt men in the city; but in vain: The judge admired the effects of their mutual friendſhip, and would willingly have ſaved Ruſtan for Mirza's ſake; but the whole body of the Europeans were determined to ſee juſtice executed on the murderer of their countryman, and it would have been very impolitick in him to ſave a life, juſtly forfeited, at the expence of the diſpleaſure of ſo great a body, on whom the trade of Moaco depended. Thus the judge remained obſtinate, and the interceſſion of the European merchants alone was ſufficient to delay the execution. Mirza repaired to the Conſul of the Europeans, offering him a ſum of money for his interpoſition with the Cadi; which he accepted, and the Europeans at laſt agreed to take twenty thouſand crowns as a ranſom, to be paid in forty days. Accordingly, the Cadi ſuperſeded the ſentence, and Mirza took leave of his dear friend, to raiſe the prodigious ranſom, by the ſale of their common effects. But when he came to Iſpahan, he found his treacherous ſervant had embezzled the greateſt part of their eſtate, ſo that he could raiſe only two thirds of the promiſed ſum; he applied to all their Relations, to borrow the remaining part, but in vain; they ſhunned the unhappy Mirza, and deſerted him, when they ſaw he had diſpoſed of his fortune: That friendſhip they ſo much admired, while they were in flouriſhing circumſtances, they now accounted madneſs. The generous Mirza was too much affected with the danger of his friend, to be much moved with the ingratitude of their common relations, and reſolved to ſet him at liberty at any rate. He had nothing left but their houſhold goods, with his wife and children; even theſe he parted with, and tho' he lov'd his wife with all the tenderneſs of a new born paſſion, and his children beyond the common bounds of paternal affection, yet neither nuptial love, nor the fondneſs of a parent for his offſpring, was equal to his friendſhip. Accordingly he bargained with a dealer in ſlaves, received the purchaſe money, and delivered them with a heart overcharged with grief beyond deſcription. The tender but ſubmiſſive upbraidings of a loving ſpouſe, the ſoft complaints of ſuffering infants, the anguiſh of a fond father and affectionate huſband, at ſo fatal a parting, repreſent a ſcene too full of horror, too big with unnatural woe for human language to expreſs.

The unhappy Mirza no ſooner found himſelf poſſeſſed of his friend's ranſom, than he ſet out with a caravan of merchants, travelling to Moaco, flattering himſelf with the pleaſing idea, that he ſhould at laſt be able to releaſe his friend; but fate had another trial in ſtore for him, another ſubject to exerciſe the mighty power of friendſhip. When their caravan was within a day's journey of Moaco, they were attacked by a band of robbers, who, in ſpite of a gallant reſiſtance, ſtripped them of every thing but their cloaths.

Mirza was, for ſome minutes, in deſpair, agitated with the moſt poignant grief, to find that all his hopes were vaniſhed; he upbraided fate for ſparing his life in the engagement, ſince he could be of no ſervice to his friend; but, recollecting himſelf on a ſudden, he determined to ſacrifice his own life, to obtain the liberty of his friend. Inſpired with this reſolution, he proceeded to Moaco, and went directly to the Cadi, acquainting him that he had endeavoured to raiſe the ranſom of his friend, but could not recover the whole, unleſs Ruſtan went in perſon to execute the ſale of part of his eſtate, which he might do within the time limited, offering, withal, to remain in his place, and ſubmit to ſuffer the ſentence, if Ruſtan did not return. The Cadi was ſurpriſed at the generous behaviour of this uncommon friend; and, after conſulting with the Europeans, who were to receive the money, conſented that Mirza ſhould be accepted in ſecurity for Ruſtan's return. Mirza then told his friend a formal ſtory, which induced him to believe that his preſence at Iſpahan would procure the deſired ſum, without hinting one word of what had happened to himſelf. Ruſtan ſet out the next day, fully ſenſible of the prodigious obligations he lay under to the generous Mirza.

Day after day paſſed, in hopes of Ruſtan's return; the day of execution approached, but no tidings of Ruſtan; the Europeans beſet the palace of the Cadi, demanding juſtice on the ſecurity of Ruſtan. The Cadi ſent for the unhappy friend; and aſked him what he had to offer, to pacify the enraged Europeans? Mirza told the Judge he had nothing to ſay in his defence; that he had reſolved, when he entered the priſon, to ſuffer for his friend; that he knew, tho' Ruſtan did not, that it was impoſſible to raiſe the ranſom: And then related his adventure in his laſt expedition to Iſpahan, the reſolution he had taken, when robbed, and the artifice he had made uſe of, to perſuade Ruſtan to go for that city. This relation drew tears from all that were preſent, and the rigorous Judge expreſſed his amazement at the uncommon effects of friendſhip; but the Europeans, who ſaw the hopes of their great ranſom was vaniſhed, breathed nothing but revenge, and inſiſted that Mirza ſhould ſuffer the puniſhment, to which his friend was condemned. The Cadi found in himſelf all the emotions of tender compaſſion for the unhappy young man, but was obliged, in compliance to the laws, and the ſanguinary humour of the mercenary Europeans, to give orders for Mirza's execution, at the hour appointed; but, to mitigate the ſeverity, as much as in his power, directed that it ſhould be done in private.

The Europeans crouded to the priſon, to ſee the laſt effort of ſo ſtrange a friendſhip; and the Cadi himſelf, willing to ſee if human nature was capable of ſupporting ſuch a ſtrange calamity, went likewiſe to the place of execution. The dreadful apparatus of death, was prepared in an inner room of the priſon, which opened by two folding doors, to the great gallery, where the ſpectators waited for the fatal cataſtrophe. Mirza was brought out, and viewed the croud of mercenary Europeans with contempt; he ſurveyed the dreadful engine on which he was to ſuffer, with the utmoſt compoſure of mind, without expreſſing the leaſt dread in his countenance; on the contrary, as the fixed minute approached, his ſerenity ſeemed to increaſe, and a chearful ſmile ſettled on his countenance; and, addreſſing himſelf to the Cadi, ſaid, "I enjoy a pleaſure unknown to mortals, the tranſporting thought of dying to ſave my friend! A thought ſo exquiſite, that my mortal faculties are too ſmall to contain the extaſy: This frail fabrick has no organs proper to expreſs my joy; but the happy hour is come, when that engine, now my only comfort, frees me from this clog of earth, and wafts me to happier regions, where I ſhall enjoy a whole eternity, in contemplating the mighty tranſport." Then, bowing down his head to the ground, he bid adieu to the Cadi, and entered the place of execution, with the extaſy of a bridegroom. He was extended on the rack, but, before the executioner received the ſignal to pull the wheel, the doors were ſhut, and the croud diſmiſſed.

The city of Moaco reſounded with the magnanimous behaviour of the generous Mirza; the inhabitants pitied his fate, and curſed the avarice of the European merchants; even they relented, and were heard to murmur out his praiſes, in ſpite of their diſappointment for the loſs of the ranſom, that they had flattered themſelves with receiving. The conjectures, with regard to Ruſtan, were various; but moſt blamed him for not returning when he found it impoſſible to raiſe the ranſom; Ruſtan was however blamed in vain. For, on his arrival at Iſpahan, he was acquainted with the true ſtate of his affairs, and from ſome merchants of that caravan, who were returned, learned what had become of his effects; and as a friendſhip, ſuch as theirs could not exiſt but in a ſympathy of ſouls, he ſoon gueſſed the motive of his friend's conduct, in ſending him to Iſpahan, but reſolved to diſappoint him, by returning within the time limited. Hurried by the danger Mirza was in, he ſtayed but one night in the City, reſolving to ſet out next morning for Moaco, to diſcharge his faithful ſecurity; but he was prevented; ſome malicious perſon, finding the affairs of the co-partnerſhip deſperate, complained to the Cadi, that Ruſtan owed him a conſiderable ſum of money. The unhappy man was brought before the Magiſtrate, and, by the force of perjury, committed to priſon till payment of the pretended debt. This was the utmoſt effort of malicious fortune; friendſhip, honour, and reputation, were now forfeited, and the unhappy Ruſtan had not a glimpſe of hope. His grief, his anguiſh, and deſpair were boundleſs as their cauſe, and too great for the power of words to expreſs. His caſe ſoon became publick at Iſpahan, and the moſt obdurate hearts melted into tears at his unhappy fate; but this pity was deſtitute of relief, till chance, or rather the unerring hand of providence, carried the ſhocking tale to the Captain of that band of robbers who had attacked the caravan. This wretch was touched with remorſe at the relation, and was reſolved to attone for his paſt villainies, by one act of juſtice and generoſity. He ſent immediately to the Magiſtrate, acquainting him that he was the perſon who had robbed the caravan, and was willing to return all the effects, if aſſured of pardon. The propoſal was accepted, the goods were delivered to the owners, and the money, taken from Mirza, was paid to Ruſtan, with a large additional ſum, of which the robber made him a preſent. Thus he was at once delivered from all his difficulties, but feared that the time loſt had forfeited his friend's life, which was the only misfortune he dreaded.

He ſet out with all expedition for Moaco, and hurried to the priſon; but did not arrive till a day after the execution, and heard the dreadful cataſtrophe of his dear friend, and his gallant behaviour in his laſt moments. The thoughts, that himſelf only was inſtrumental to his death, were reflections too heavy for humanity; the unhappy Ruſtan ſunk under his calamity, and fell into a ſwoon, in which he remained for ſome hours.

The noiſe of his arrival ſoon ſpread thro' the city, and the priſon was again crouded by Europeans, and people of all nations, who came to gaze on ſo uncommon an object; the Cadi himſelf made one of the number, and ordered remedies to be applied, to recover the yet ſpeechleſs Ruſtan. At laſt he came to himſelf, but it was only to feel a weight ſuperior to the hand of death. He attempted to lay violent hands on himſelf, and called aloud to the Cadi for his friend. This Magiſtrate, touched with his misfortunes, ordered the Europeans, who had proſecuted Ruſtan, to appear before him, and demanded if they had any claim upon him; they acknowledged they had not, ſince his friend, by his death, had ſatisfied the law, which they were ſorry had been carried to ſuch extremity. The Cadi entered their confeſſion, upon record, and then produced an order of the Baſhaw of the province to pardon both the friends, and, upon a ſignal given, Mirza appeared, to the ſurpriſe of all the ſpectators; but the tranſports of the friends admit of no deſcription; ſuch only as are capable of ſo pure a flame, can have any idea of the mighty extaſy. When the firſt tranſports of their mutual endearments were over, they mutually acknowledged the juſtice and humanity of the Cadi, who, by his intereſt, had procured a pardon from the Baſhaw, and, by the ſham execution of Mirza, ſatisfied the malice of the greedy Europeans. Ruſtan related to the Cadi the ſucceſs of his journey to Iſpahan, and, by that means, removed all ſuſpicion from himſelf, of uſing his friend with leſs amity than he deſerved, and filled the whole audience with admiration, at the ſurprizing viciſſitudes of ſublunary things, and the wiſdom of the divine director of events, in ordering his his dispensations for the virtuous, and the manifestation of his own glory and justice.

The two friends, after continuing a few days at Moaco, returned to Ispahan, where Mirza redeemed his wife and children, and lived with them and his dear friend, in mutual fidelity, to a great age.

CADIZ, August 27.

WE hear from Gibraltar, that Letters have been received there from Tetuan, with Advice of the Arrival of Capt. Steenis and his Crew at Fez, after a long and painful March, in which they underwent all Manner of Hardships. Their Food, during their whole March, consisted of a little Rice, or Flour and Water, with a very small Portion of black Bread.

Soon after their Arrival at Fez, the Emperor of Morocco sent for the Capt. and desired him to relate his Misfortune; and Mr. Steenis perceiving he was affected with the Account he gave him, embraced this Opportunity to assure him, how desirous the States General were to conclude the Peace which they had been so many Years negociating; and the Emperor answered in very favourable Terms. After this Capt. Steenis begg'd him to determine the Affair of his Ransom, and that of his Crew, which the Emperor assured him he would immediately send Orders to the Bashaw of Tetuan about. Capt. Steenis met with a great deal of Humanity in the Emperor, from whence he obtained much better Treatment for the Dutch Prisoners than they had heretofore met with, and their Labours render'd much less painful than it was at Tetuan. Moreover the Captain himself is entirely at his Liberty to go about Fez without any Guard.

Venice, Sept. 13. We learn from Constantinople, that it has been discovered, that the black Eunuchs were Favourers of the Plot which was form'd in the Seraglio, and that the Grand Seignior, in order to punish them according to their Temerity, had caused 18 of them to be strangled, and their Bodies to be thrown into the Sea. According to these Advices, the Catastrophe of the Kislar Agasi has been followed by that of almost all his Favourites, both in this Capital, and in the Provinces. One amongst the rest was Jacob Aga, one of the Bankers of the Porte, who was arrested and obliged by Torments to discover all he knew of the immense Riches of the Kislar Agasi. After having extorted from him all they could, they strangled him, and threw his Body into the Sea. The new Grand Vizir, is in the highest Degree of Credit.

We have just received Advice, that the famous Bashaw of Rhodes has been arrested by the Grand Seignior's Orders, and has been sent Prisoner to a Castle upon the Coast of the Sea of Marmora, his Sublime Highness having discovered that he had encouraged the Janissaries to Mutiny, and because there was, in other Respects, every Thing to fear from his ambitious and enterprizing Spirit.

Warsaw, Sept. 16. Letters from the Ukrain advise, that the Haidamacks have made a fresh Incursion there, and have plundered the two Towns of Murachwa and Thiworow. The Peasants of Podolia are so irritated against these Robbers, that having taken two of them, they caused one to be roasted alive.

Bastia, August 26. The Malecontents have at length pretty clearly expressed their own Sentiments in a Manifesto, which is succinct, elegant and pathetick; the Scope of it may be discerned from the last Sentence, which is this: 'People subject to the mere Will and Pleasure of another Nation are Slaves; and People who accept for Mediators a third Nation, have made the first Step towards being Slaves. The only true Notion of Freedom is, having no Master but the Laws, and those Laws the deliberate Sense of the wisest Men in the Community. He who thinks thus is a Corsican, and may be free if he will act as he thinks; he who thinks otherwise is a Slave, let him assume what Name he pleases.'

Utretcht, Sept. 27. As the King of Great-Britain has the Success of adjusting the Pretensions of the Elector Palatine very much at Heart, 'tis not doubted but that the Empress Queen will agree to the principal Articles. As soon as the final Consent of the Court of Vienna shall arrive at Hanover, Notice will be given of it at Manheim, to the End that the Elector Palatine may send his Minister with the necessary full Powers, in order to sign the Convention at Hanover, before the Departure of the King of Great-Britain for England. This Elector being once satisfied, 'tis not doubted but the Elector of Cologn will join his Concurrence, and act in Concert with the other, without Delay, to the Election of a King of the Romans.

Hague, Sept. 27. There is great Likelihood that the Princess Governante will stay at Dieren till the next Month, or, perhaps, 'till his Britannick Majesty passes that Way in his Return to London. 'Tis resolved, that the Mourning for the late Stadtholder shall be continued till the Beginning of next Year; and People are to go in Second Mourning till the 4th of March, the Birth-Day of the present Stadtholder, when Mourning is entirely to be left off.

Petersbourg, Sept. 5. Last Week General Baron de Ludras died in this City generally regreted. He had an extraordinary Capacity, and had been forty Years employed in the Service of this Empire. In the Year 1717 he accompanied the late Emperor Peter the Great in his Journey into Holland and England. The new Canal, and the great Works which have lately been carried on at Cronstadt, were directed by this General.

Copenhagen, Sept. 8. The Treaty of Commerce intended to be concluded with the Emperor of Morocco is deferred, by Reason of the Inconveniency which may result from it in Respect to the Commerce which the Danish Subjects carry on in Spain.

LONDON, Sept. 27.

The Men of War at Chatham are all victualled, and order'd for Portsmouth, to join those there ready for Service.

Forces are raising in order to be shipped on board the East-India Company's Ships outward-bound, for the better Security of their Settlements.

October 5, It is said that Col. Halket's Regiment of Foot, now quartered at Limerick in Ireland, will soon embark for Nova-Scotia, for the Service of which Garrison a great Quantity of warlike Stores was last Week shipped in the River.

The Amazon Man of War, lately put into Commission, is ordered to be mann'd and victualled at Deptford for Sea Service.

Newcastle, Sept. 30. On Thursday Morning, Owen Macdonald, was executed on the Town Moor, for the Murder of Mr. Parker, a Cooper of this Town, by stabbing him with a Knife in a Quarrel that happen'd at Mr. Pinkney's in the Big-Market, between him and another Person of the same Name and Trade as the former. His Body was carried to the Surgeons Hall, and there dissected and anatomized according to his Sentence. This most unfortunate Youth was about nineteen Years of Age, appear'd during all the Time of his Confinement, deeply affected with a true Sense of his Guilt, and regreted much the murdered Person, whom he declar'd to be no Cause of the Quarrel between him and the surviving Mr. Parker; but at the Gallows his Behaviour in endeavouring to throw the Executioner from the Ladder, was unbecoming one just on the Brink of Eternity; however, as it was generally and justly believ'd, that he had been grosly irritated to the Perpetration of the Crime for which he suffer'd his unhappy End, was pitied by every one.

We are credibly informed that two Men of War will next Summer be sent on the Discovery of a North-West Passage.

Edinburgh, Sept. 28. Thursday last, came on at Inverary, before the Circuit Court there, the Trial of James Stuart, indicted as Art and Part of the Murder of Colin Campbell of Glenure, Esq; late Factor on the forfeited Estate of Ardshiel, when the Relevancy of the Libel was determined; and on Friday Morning the Court proceeded to the Examination of Witnesses, which continued to four a Clock Sabbath Morning following, after which the Evidences pro and con being summed up, about Seven, the Jury inclosed, and sat till 'twixt Eleven and Twelve that Forenoon; on Monday they return'd their Verdict, unanimously finding the Pannel Guilty, Art and Part, of the Murder of Glenure. He is sentenced to be hanged the 8th of November next, on a conspicuous Eminence on the South Side of the Ferry of Ballachelish, near where the Murder was committed, and to be afterwards hung in Chains there.

Bristol, Sept. 30. Monday last, a large Wen, upwards of four Pounds Weight, was taken off a Woman's Thigh, at Lawrence-Hill.

ANNAPOLIS, November 16.

We have the melancholy Account of the Loss of the Ship Peggy and Nancy, Capt. Isaac Johns, on the 22d of October last, on Willoughby Point. She was forced on by a violent North-East Wind, about Ten at Night, and lay beating 'til after Break of Day next Morning, when she bilged; but the People are all happily sav'd, and the Sails and Rigging, and five Hogsheads of Tobacco; the rest all lost, she having 338 Hogsheads on board.

We are informed that Mary Perry (formerly mentioned) who was sentenced to die at last Provincial Court, and pleaded her Belly, but was found by a Jury of Matrons to be not Quick [the Foreman being an experienced Midwife] was delivered, a few Days afterwards, in Queen Ann's County Goal, of a lusty Boy.

November 23. Tuesday last the worshipful Justices of Anne Arundel County, then sitting in Court, ordered a Person, who swore profanely in their Hearing, to be publickly whipp'd, which was immediately put in Execution.

PHILADELPHIA, December 14.

Thursday last arrived here Capt. Rees, late of the Brigantine Richmond, of this Place, who, as has been mentioned, was cast away on Turks-Island, in his Passage to Jamaica. He informs us, that the Storm happened on the 12th of September, O.S. and was so violent, that the Bottom of his Vessel soon parted from her upper Works; and that with the greatest Difficulty he and his People got ashore in their Long-boat; that when they got ashore, they were often obliged to throw themselves flat on the Ground, to hinder their being carried away by the Violence of the Wind, and that the People on the Island lost above Twenty Thousand Bushels of Salt during the Storm. He informs us likewise, that there was a good deal of Damage done at and near Providence, by a Gale of Wind that happened afterwards; that one Ship was cast away; another belonging to Liverpool, lost her Masts; and that Capt. Cox, in a Sloop, was ashore high and dry; besides other Losses, which he could not be particular in.

On Saturday Captain Edwards, late of the Ship Ruby, of this Port, also arriv'd in Town. He was cast away coming through the Gulph, in his Passage from Jamaica, on the second of November last, and boarded by a Number of Indians, who stripp'd him and his People of every Thing, not leaving him so much as a Jacket: His Chest, in which there was a good deal of Money, he likewise lost, tho' he made several Attempts to save it. He then, with his Hands, got into the Long-boat, taking with great Difficulty some Provision and Water from the Ship, and in four Days got to Georgia, and from thence to Charles-Town, in South-Carolina. A Ship, a French Snow, and a Sloop (supposed to belong to New-York, a Sloop belonging there being in Company before the Storm happen'd) were all ashore at the same time with Captain Edwards, and all plunder'd he imagines by the Indians. There were fourteen Sail of Vessels in Sight of one another a short Time before the Storm began, and it is to be fear'd that most of them have shar'd the same Fate with those mention'd, as the Storm began the 28th of October, and lasted till the third of November. Amongst them was the Kingston, Capt. M'Dougall, a large Ship, bound for this Place. Captain Edwards saw Captain Levan, of Rhode-Island, in Charles-Town, who was bound to Jamaica, but lost on Attwood's Keys.

Saturday Last James Rice was executed for the Murder of John Thomas and Eleanor Davis. Thomas Kelly was reprieved till Saturday next, in order to see and know the Person mentioned in our last to be taken up in Baltimore County, on Suspicion of being the third Murderer; but on his seeing him, he said he had never seen him before; upon which the Man was discharged.

 Just published, and sold by the Printers hereof, POOR RICHARD's, the POCKET, JERMAN's, and MOORE's ALMANACKS, for the Year 1753.

MR. DOVE, English Professor at the Academy, finding his former house too little for the number of his boarders, has taken Rock-hall, which is situated in a wholsome air very near the Academy, and most commodiously adapted for the reception of young gentlemen at board; washing and lodging. The great advantages that children will receive from their living with a master, may easily appear from this consideration; That as they will be always under his inspection, he will have a better opportunity of discovering their different inclinations and humours, of forming their manners, and correcting their language and writing. Besides which, care will be taken, to instruct them morning, noon and night, in several useful books, by way of recreation, which are not taught in the public school.

N. B. Said Dove, if desired, will at leisure hours instruct any of his boarders in the Greek, Latin, or French Grammar, without any additional expence to their parents or friends.

As there ſeem'd to be an inclination in the inhabitants of this city, to have the ſteeple built upon the foundation laid many years ago, the Veſtry were encouraged to attempt a Subſcription; but as all the money they could raiſe, including what little is yet outſtanding, falls much ſhort of the ſum neceſſary to compleat the work, as will be ſhewn by a ſtate of the account of what is already done, they are therefore under a neceſſity to take this method, or the building remain unfiniſhed.

We hope that a work of this kind, which is purely ornamental, will meet with encouragement from all well-wiſhers to the credit, beauty and proſperity of Philadelphia.

The following Article of News will give us ſome Idea of the Character of the preſent Archbiſhop of Paris, who has raiſed ſuch a Combuſtion in France.

PARIS, Auguſt 1.

A VERY odd Affair has happen'd here, which, it is thought, will have conſiderable Conſequences. Our Archbiſhop demanded of the Provoſt of the Merchants (reſembling the Office of Lord Mayor) a larger Quantity of Water to be laid into his Palace. That Magiſtrate, deſirous to oblige him, called a common Council, in which, though it appeared that the Archbiſhop had the ſame Quantity with which his Predeceſſors have been content, a Minute was nevertheleſs made, that it ſhould be increaſed to near an Inch; that is, that he ſhould have as much Water as a Pipe of an Inch Bore will run in a Day; and which is as much as is allowed to a Prince of the Blood. The Town Clerk was ordered to carry a Copy of this Minute to the Archbiſhop, who, having read it, tore it to Pieces, rubb'd it under the Town Clerk's Noſe, and ſaid, with great Indignation, 'There's your City's Inch.' The common Council being acquainted with this, ordered the Minute to be eraſed out of their Books, and an Account thereof to be laid before his Majeſty.

Paris, Sept. 4, N. S. Letters from Madrid of the 29th ult. ſay, that his Catholick Majeſty has reſolved to ſend a ſtrong Squadron to America, to ſupport his Guarda-Coſta's in the Execution of their Orders for preventing every Kind of contraband Trade. Which Reſolution, they tell us, he has taken upon Advice that the Britiſh Court intends to ſend a Squadron to the Weſt-Indies, to protect the Commerce and Navigation of the Engliſh; and we can tell them, that if both theſe Reſolutions be carried into Execution, the Fate of the Spaniſh Squadron may be eaſily foretold.

Ratiſbon, Sept. 5, N. S. The Court of Vienna, among other Reaſons for refuſing to ſatisfy the Pretenſions of the Elector Palatine, has principally inſiſted upon the following: That after the Death of Charles VI. the Elector having openly declared againſt the Pragmatick Sanction, which he had guarantied, the Damage that happened to him from the Auſtrian Troops, in Conſequence of that Declaration, ought to be looked on as the common Fate of War. Thus the Imperial Court has probably ſaved us 20,000l.

Hanover, Sept. 15. As his Majeſty was taking the Diverſion of Stag-hunting a few Days ago in the Neighbourhood of Ghorde, one of thoſe Animals, in the Violence of his Courſe, unhorſed the Count de Schulembourg, and the Baron de Hardenberg; the former of whom was very dangerouſly wounded, but the latter was but ſlightly hurt.

From the Weſtminſter Journal, September 23, 1752.

We hear, that when the Mutiny Bill comes next under Conſideration, it will be propoſed to make thoſe reverend Perſons, who may, in the ſtricteſt Senſe, be ſtiled the Church Militant, ſtill more uſeful and regular in their Attendance, than they are at preſent. It being apprehended that a little Religion, would not be amiſs amongſt the private Men, at leaſt would ſave the Trouble of frequent Court-Martials, leſſen the Number of Military Puniſhments, and render the Army more regular, and conſequently more acceptable in their Quarters.

Among ſome very intelligent People, it is thought at leaſt very problematical, whether the grand Aſſembly will break up after next Winter or not. The Reaſons offered in Support of this Sentiment are, that it is right to keep dutiful Servants as long as poſſible; that in all Changes there is a Hazard; and that upon ſtrict Enquiry it is very doubtful whether the new Improvements will quit Coſt. Whether all theſe Arguments will determine the all-wiſe Directions to the Negative, is far from being certain; but being too poſitive, in Point of Speculation, may do honeſt Men hurt.

September 29. We have a Confirmation of the melancholy News of a dreadful Earthquake in Turkey, by which upwards of 200 Moſques and a Multitude of Houſes were deſtroyed at Adrianople; ſome hundred of Perſons were buried in the Ruins, the lateſt Letters ſay two thouſand; and it was feared the Conſequences of this terrible Shock would be felt in Places at ſome Diſtance. The Janizaries are ſtill in the ſame Diſpoſition, notwithſtanding there have been Numbers of them ſecretly deſtroyed, and make no Scruple of crying in the Streets, 'New Meaſures, or a new Sultan.'

Extract of a Letter from a foreign Miniſter at Hanover, dated September 20.

"It is now generally believed in the Empire, that ſomething has happened which ſtops the Progreſs of his Britannick Majeſty in the Affair of electing a King of the Romans, or which, at leaſt, retards the Execution of it: No Body has doubted of this ſince the Arrival of the laſt Diſpatches here from Vienna; but People are greatly embarraſſed to diſcover what could be the Stumbling-Block which has been thrown ſo unluckily in the Way; and their Sentiments are greatly divided thereupon. There are ſome who think that the Court of Vienna refuſes to hearken to any Thing which the Elector Palatine demands of it, particularly to the Propoſition which it is pretended has been made to it, in relation to the Ceſſion of a little Territory to the Palatine Court, which has really no other Right to it, than that of Conveniency. Others, as has been heretofore obſerved, believe, with great Probability, that their Imperial Majeſties, and the King of Great Britain, are deſirous of making the Work perfect, and of rendering the Election abſolutely unanimous, by obtaining the Voice of the King of Pruſſia, who, as we are aſſured, will not refuſe it, if his Demands be almoſt ever ſo little complied with. That Monarch, it is ſaid, has ſufficiently intimated this, by his Miniſters at the Imperial Court; and that it is in Conſequence thereof, that a Negociation is actually carrying on between the Courts of Vienna and Berlin.

An Extract of a Letter from a foreign Miniſter at Paris, dated September 26.

"If the exterior Demonſtrations which ſometimes Princes make of their Affection are a certain Proof of their Way of thinking, one muſt believe that there cannot be a cloſer Connection than between the Courts of Verſailles and Bonn: His Serene Electoral Highneſs of Cologn, has cauſed Te Deum to be ſolemnly ſung for the Re-eſtabliſhment of the Health of the Dauphin. He, in all Likelihood, is the only Prince in the Empire, who will order any Thing of the like Nature; yet there are ſeveral others who are as cloſely attach'd to France as he is: That Court, even at the Time that it was rejoicing that the Heir of the Crown had eſcaped from the Jaws of Death, ſees the Nation afreſh divided by the Factions which his Indiſpoſition had in a great Meaſure calmed. The Parliament has begun again to aſſert its Privileges. The Council of State having on the 21ſt diſannull'd one of the Parliament's Arrets, the Chambers thereupon immediately aſſembled, and reſolved to make Remonſtrances, and take Meaſures againſt the ſaid Arret of Council.

The Dauphin, beſides the Affliction of his late Diſtemper, has met with an Affair which has a little agitated him. Sieur Sylveſtre, Draughtſman of this Prince, had, with his Approbation, aſked M. de Vaudieres, Intendant of the King's Buildings, and Brother-in-Law to Madam de Pompadour, the Place vacant by the Death of Mr. Coypel, which was promiſed him; but was afterwards given to another. At this the Dauphin took Fire, and, by his Advice, Sylveſtre wrote an exceeding ſharp Letter to M. Vaudieres, who immediately carried it to the King, and thereupon Sylveſtre was ſent to the Baſtile.

At the Time that the Credit of Madam de Pompadour is contending with that of the Dauphin, and has ſo far the Aſcendant as to cauſe Sylveſtre to be ſhut up in the Baſtile, ſhe is cauſing, by Degrees, M. de Maurepas to come again to Court. This diſgraced Miniſter, after having obtained Leave to return to Bourges, near Paris, has juſt been permitted to fix at Meulan. It is foreſeen that he will again have a ſhare in the Government."

LONDON.

September 27. We hear that the Cruiſer Sloop of War will ſoon be put into Commiſſion, and the Command given to Captain Webb.

October 2. From Hanover we have an Account, that her Grace the Dutcheſs of Newcaſtle, is quite recovered; as are his Grace's Domeſticks, who had been dangerouſly ill.

Laſt Week a Widow Gentlewoman near Stretton Grounds, aged 71, was married to a young Batchelor about 25.

Sir James Gray, Bart. Reſident at Venice, is arrived here from that Court.

On Saturday Morning about one a Clock, a Fire broke out at Mr. Smith's, Coach-maker, in Whitechapel Road, which burnt with great Violence, and for want of Water conſumed the ſame, with two Houſes in Front, and four others backwards; alſo the Brewhouſe of Mr. Quick, at the Prince of Orange, and the Storehouſes of Mr. Edwards. A Woman was detected in robbing Mr. Chorkley, one of the unfortunate Perſons burnt out, of a Bed and wearing Apparel, and the ſame Day was committed to New-Priſon, by Sir Samuel Gower.

October 4. The Prince Rupert, Capt. Spurrill, is arrived at Dover, and the Seahorſe, Cap. Fowler, from Hudſon's Bay, in the River, both in the Service of that Company, with valuable Cargoes on board.

October 5. They write from Plymouth, that his Majeſty's Ship the Dolphin, Capt. How, in ſailing out of the Road in the Night, to be ready to accompany Commodore Edgecumbe, ran foul of a Rock on the Corner of St. Nicholas Iſland, by which ſhe received ſo much Damage, that ſhe was obliged to return to refit.

They write from Plymouth, the firſt Inſtant, that his Majeſty's Ships, Culloden, Cumberland and Savage, from the Eaſtward, were arrived there. The Deptford Man of War is ſailed for the Streights.

It is remarkable that almoſt all the Negociations that have been begun ſince the Concluſion of the Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, have either miſcarried, or go on at a lame Rate: The Election of a King of the Romans proceeds very ſlowly; the Commiſſaries at Bruſſels are holding a Vacation. There is no End like to be put to the Deliberations of the Dutch in Regard to the Tutelage of their Stadtholder, to the regulating their Finances, and to the ſettling their Free Port. The Pretenſions of the Engliſh for a Freedom of Commerce in America, are but little attended to; the Engliſh and French Commiſſaries do nothing at Paris; the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion there does little more: They act like Players at Cheſs, who advance and draw back their Pieces, in order to make the Game continue for ever.

Some private Letters from Vienna intimate, that that Court is in ſome Agitation in Relation to the Turn that the Alterations which have happened at Conſtantinople may poſſibly give to publick Affairs. How pacifick, ſay they, ſoever the new Grand Vizir may be naturally, he will certainly prefer his own Safety to his private Sentiments, and conſequently he cannot help exciting his Maſter to enter into a War. This is what likewiſe a little perplexes the Court of Peterſbourg, and perhaps too, may be one of the Reaſons for ſuſpending the Affair of the Election of a King of the Romans.

On Saturday laſt was committed by John Mair, Eſq; Mayor of Graveſend, a Waterman, who, with another not yet taken, robbed a poor Man of Five Shillings and Three Halfpence. They had agreed to carry him over the Water to Tilbury for Four Shillings, which was depoſited in the Hands of a Perſon, to be paid them on their Return; but when they had got him into the Boat, and very near the oppoſite Shore, they threatened him, with ſeveral Imprecations, to hang him unleſs he immediately paid them a Guinea over and above the Four Shillings, and on his Refuſal continued rowing backwards and forwards near three Hours, which ſo intimidated him as to occaſion his giving them the above Sum, which was all he had in his Pocket; they afterwards demanded the Four Shillings of the Perſon in whoſe Hands it was depoſited.

Laſt Week two Boatſwains, and their two Servants, going in their Boat from Chatham to Sheerneſs in the hard Gale of Wind, the Boat overſet and they were all drown'd. One of them was Boatſwain of the Dolphin Man of War.

October 7. Amongſt other Strokes of Satire, levelled againſt the too zealous Clergy in France, one is a Print, in the Front of which is a Repreſentation of St. Peter, labouring to pacify ſome epiſcopal Shepherds, who, with their Crooks, force the Sheep to beat their Heads one againſt another, with this Sentence coming out of his Mouth; "Brethren, the Command to me was, feed the Flock, not make them fight." At a Diſtance there are a ſmall Number of religious Perſons, their Eyes fixed on the Ground, and with one Hand on their Breaſts, on which is inſcribed, "Have Mercy on us Sinners:" Againſt them march a Body of Prieſts with Swords drawn, and behind them a Corps of Jeſuits, drawing a Train of ſpiritual Artillery. Beyond theſe a large Church in Ruins, with this Inſcription on a corner Stone, "A Houſe divided againſt itſelf cannot ſtand." In one Corner ſtand ſeveral Prelates looking upwards, with this Label formed from their Mouths, "Let Fire come down from Heaven, and conſume them." Above is a Lamb repoſing on a Croſs, from whence theſe Words ſeem to be let fall, "Ye know not of what Spirit ye are." This Print is not publickly ſold, but as yet, it has not been cenſured.

Laſt Tueſday there was a very extraordinary Examination before John Fielding, Eſq;---A Woman, for ſome Reaſons, thought proper to break off from her Huſband, and marry another of the Name of Bennet: This Huſband diſobliging her alſo, ſhe went to ſome People to whom, on her Account, they owed Money, and inſtigated them to arreſt the two Huſbands, which was done; and by her Means, both the Huſbands were put into a Goal. As ſoon as they had obtained their Liberty, Eaſtwood (the firſt Huſband) took out a Warrant, in order to have her ſecured for Bigamy: She was taken, and upon the Examination ſhe alledged, that in order to gain a Point, he had formerly ſwore ſhe was not his Wife, notwithſtanding he had taken a Warrant out, upon Oath, that ſhe was his Wife: Finding, if he perſiſted in it, the Woman would be hanged, he wanted again to retract; upon which, the Juſtice deſired the Clerk to write down his Declaration, and ordered him to ſign it. When he took the Pen in Hand, ſtung by his Conſcience, he fell a trembling, and at laſt dropped the Pen; obſerving that he would not commit double Perjury, for that ſhe really was his Wife: Upon this the Woman was ſent to the Gate-Houſe, and the Parties ſecured for further Examination.

By the Accounts from Stourbridge Fair, in Worceſterſhire, we hear that all Sorts of Goods ſold very bad, particularly Woollen Goods and Hops. There was the greateſt Quantity of Wool ever known by the oldeſt Man living, which ſold for 3s. 6d. per Ton under laſt Year's Price; and 'tis thought it will be ſtill lower, as Trade is very bad both in Yorkſhire and Somerſetſhire, two of the greateſt cloathing Countries in all England; ſo that the Wooll Ingroſſers will be in a fine Hole this Year, as well as the laſt.

Laſt Wedneſday 7-night a general Search was made throughout all the Wards of this City, by the reſpective Conſtables thereof, by Virtue of Warrants exhibited for that Purpoſe by the right Worſhipful the Mayor, and the Worſhipful the Aldermen, when thirteen lewd Women, two Men, and a Boy were taken into Cuſtody, and committed to Bridewell: It ſeems their Orders were to ſearch all ſuſpected Houſes of ill Fame, the Magiſtrates being determined to root up all thoſe Places of Wickedneſs and Vice, which are ſo fatal to the Youth of this City.

A Company of Commerce is eſtabliſhed at Meſſina, for ſetting up Manufactures of Stuff, Silk and Camblet; and, in order to contribute to their Succeſs, his Sicilian Majeſty has exempted them from all Kinds of Duties for ten Years, and has, in ſome Meaſure, prohibited raw Silk from going out of the Kingdom, not permitting Half the Quantity to be ſent away that uſed heretofore to be exported.

BOSTON, November 30.

We hear that an induſtrious Farmer who went to the Eaſtern Parts laſt Spring, has, this Summer, raiſed as many fine large Turnips at Broad Bay, as he ſold in thoſe Parts for 50 £. old Tenor, and above 100 Buſhels of the beſt Sort of Potatoes, which ſhows the Fertility of the Soil in thoſe Parts.

A Quantity of Turnips and Potatoes were alſo brought to this Town

Town from thoſe Parts, which were looked upon to be as large and as good as any that have been raiſed in this Province. One of the Turnips weigh'd 5 lb.

December 4. One Night laſt Week, a Brigantine from the Weſt Indies, endeavouring to get into Cape Anne Harbour, had the Misfortune to run upon the Rocks, and it is feared ſhe will be loſt, with the greateſt Part of her Cargo.

By Letters from New-London we have an Account, that on the 25th of November paſt, a Spaniſh Regiſter Ship called the St. Joſeph, of near 300 Tons, and 50 Men, came in there to refit. She was bound from the Havannah to Cadiz, but having ſprung a Leak, and ſuffered other Damage, had been ſeveral Days in great Diſtreſs, when happily meeting (in the Latitude of Bermudas) with a Brigt. belonging to New London, ſhe was aſſiſted and conducted into that Harbour by the Brig's People. It is ſaid ſhe had on Board 40 Cheſts of Dollars, 3 Cheſts of Gold, and a vaſt Quantity of wrought Plate, Images, &c. beſides Indigo, Cochineal, Peruvian Bark, and other rich Merchandize.----It is ſaid there are hot Diſputes between ſeveral Gentlemen at New London, about the keeping of the Treaſure, till it is known how Things will turn out, and that ſome of the moſt eminent Lawyers here, have already been conſulted in the Affair.----It is hinted, that there is Room to ſuſpect, that the Ship's Company have been guilty of ſome unjuſtifiable Practices, of which, (if true) we ſhall doubtleſs hear more in a ſhort Time.

NEW-YORK, December 11.

By Capt. Styles from Anguilla, we are informed, that ſeveral of the Negroes belonging to that Iſland, have taken Boats, and other Craft, and made their Eſcape to the French Part of the Iſland of St. Martins, where they are protected; and notwithſtanding their Owners have made Application to the French Governor, they have not received the leaſt Redreſs.

Capt. Davis, in a Snow belonging to Boſton, was loading with Salt at Anguilla, and was to ſail for New-London, in a few Days after Capt. Styles.

Laſt Saturday, a dead Whale, 45 Feet 9 Inches long, and 9 Feet thick, was found floating in our Bay, by a Jerſey Boatman, and has ſince been tow'd over upon the Jerſey Shore.

PHILADELPHIA, December 19.

Extract of a Letter from London, dated March 2, 1752.

"Lately died at Berlin Mr. La Mettrie, a learned Frenchman, whoſe Death was remarkable: He was a profeſſed Atheiſt, and, amongſt other Things, wrote and publiſhed a Book, entituled, L'Homme Machine, that is, Man a Machine; but when he was upon the Brink of Death, he was made truly ſenſible of the Exiſtence of a God, whom he had highly offended, and to whom he was going to give an Account; wherefore he greatly lamented his publiſhing ſuch abominable Stuff, even againſt his better Knowledge and Conſcience, in order to gain a great Name of Men. He was ſorry for nothing ſo much, as that it was not in his Power to recal the Offence he had thereby given, and he gave up the Ghoſt with theſe Words: Mon Dieu! s'il eſt poſſible, qu'il y ait quelque Eſperance de Pardon pour un ſi grand Pecheur tel que moi, je vous en ſupplie, &c. That is, My God! if it be poſſible that there may be yet any Hope of Pardon for ſo great a Sinner as I am, I ſupplicate you for it. God grant that this Teſtimony of the Truth, given by an Enemy of it, may have a bleſſed Effect upon many Mockers of Religion, to their timely Converſion! It is obſervable, that this Wretch aſcribed this Piece of Wickedneſs partly to a Principle of Pride, and partly to the general Corruption of Mankind, even in Chriſtendom; who from Ignorance, Profaneneſs, Prejudice, and Reſpect of Perſons, value themſelves and others on Account of their Unbelief and Infidelity, and make this a Mark of Wit, when they have nothing in Reality to boaſt of, and are intirely ignorant of what they deſpiſe; becauſe, according to the vulgar Latin Proverbs, Ignoti nulla Cupido; et Ars non habet Oſorem niſi ignorantem: That is, An unknown Thing doth not raiſe any Deſire after it; and Art, Science or Knowledge, have no Haters, but ſuch as are ignorant of them. It is alſo to be obſerved, that when Death humbles Men, and takes away the Veil and Phantoms of Pride, and the imaginary Pleaſures ariſing from a tickling Thought, to be admired by thoughtleſs and light People as a Freethinker and great Wit, then they are not capable to reſiſt the Power of convincing Proofs and Arguments, wherewith even Nature itſelf is fully ſtor'd, not only that there is a God, but alſo that he is a Judge, and the Soul immortal, and bound over to his ſupreme Tribunal; and ſuch other Truths as ſtand in Relation to theſe. And it is ſurpriſing, and ſhews a ſtrong Proof of the ſpiritual Corruption of Men, and even of the Influence of evil Spirits upon their Minds, that not only all the evincing Arguments againſt Infidelity, but even the frequent Examples of the untimely Repentance, and lamentable Exit out of the World of ſuch profeſſed Unbelievers, who were not intirely Strangers to the Knowledge of Chriſtianity, or the Uſe of Reaſon, cannot ſatisfy the reſt of their Brethren of their unhappy Condition, even in this, that their Name and Fame, whereon they ventur'd their eternal Fate, ſhall periſh with them."
